

ALEX. J. GROESBECK, THE MAN A GLIMPSE AT THE LIFE OF THE DETROIT LAW- YER WHO SEEKS REPUBLICAN NOMI- NATION FOR GOVERNOR.

Was Born on a Farm in Macomb County of Old Dutch and French Stock—Began Work in His Early
Teens and Studied Law While Driving
Team for Mill—Proved Executive Capacity While Railroad President.

ALEX. J. GROESBECK.

It is easy to make friends, but it is hard to hold them. When a man both makes and holds friends, he is worthy of careful consideration.

Such a man is Alex. J. Groesbeck, of Detroit, a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor.

It is but necessary to shake the hand of Mr. Groesbeck to feel the strong personality of the man. He impresses all who meet him as a strong man—strong in both character and in body. He is dark, a heritage of his Dutch and French ancestry, with his brown eyes that look out fearlessly, but kindly. His voice is strong and even, with a tone that has made him a great orator, although in his speeches he is not given to flamboyancy.

He is a man who grows on one—a man who wears well. He is a deep and constructive thinker, and is not swayed off his feet by the pressure of current happenings. He possesses great determination.

After the shattering of the Republican party, in 1912, he did not throw up his hands, but immediately set to work as Republican state chairman to rebuild it. He gathered together the torn ends and won a great victory in the spring campaign of 1913. He did not rest there, but has continued since to form the party members into a united force. His success is evidenced by the "welfare conference" held in Detroit on May 26, which was attended by nearly 3,000 Republicans from all parts of Michigan.

Mr. Groesbeck is a successful man of affairs. Not rich, but "well to do," as the saying is. He was one of those who saw the great growth that was to come to Detroit and he profited in real estate in the metropolis. Forced by virtue of his position as attorney for one of the creditors, into the tangled affairs of the Flint and Saginaw railroad, an interurban line, he finally took over the property, with others, completed the road between Flint and Saginaw, and afterwards extended the line to Bay City. He was president of this company and while in this position, clearly demonstrated his ability as an executive. In 1912, Mr. Groesbeck and his associates disposed of the railroad to the Saginaw Valley Traction Co., and today he has no interests in any public utility. During his incumbency of the presidency of the railroad, the wages of the men were raised from 16 cents to 28 cents per hour, and every Christmas the men were remembered with a present. Never once did they ask for a raise or present a grievance to the officials of the road.

From Old Stock.
Mr. Groesbeck is a self-made man, but in his veins flows the blood of those who first dared the wilds of the interior of this continent. On his father's side, he is directly descended from the old Dutch and French settlers. The name "Groesbeck" came to this country from Holland, with Wm. Groesbeck in 1770. He was the great-grandfather of Alex. J. Groesbeck.

Mr. Groesbeck's grandmother was Catherine St. Aubin, a direct descendant of John Cass, one of the intrepid souls who came to the present site of Detroit in 1701 with Cadillac for the purpose of founding Fort Pontchartrain.

The name of Cass became St. Aubin by a process of evolution. It was customary among the early French settlers to better identify each other by attaching the name of the province, or parish, in France from which the person came. John Cass was originally from the parish of St. Aubin, near Bordeaux, in France, and he became known as "Cass, of St. Aubin," to give a fairly literal translation. Gradually this shortened to "Cass St. Aubin" and then became "St. Aubin" alone. The family was a noted one in the early days of the settlement on the Detroit River. From his mother, Mr. Groesbeck received a touch of the Yankee shrewdness. Her name was Julia Coquillard, the daughter of Leonard Coquillard and Harriet Andros Coquillard. The Andros family came to Michigan from Connecticut. Mr. Groesbeck's mother was born in Washtenaw county.

Born in Macomb County.
Alex. J. Groesbeck was born on a farm in Warren township, Macomb county, in 1873, on Nov. 7, the son of Louis Groesbeck. He is one of nine children. Louis Groesbeck was a popular man in his community and served as justice of the peace and as supervisor, although he was also a farmer. He was afterwards sheriff of Macomb county.

Alex. Groesbeck attended school at the district school house and in the schools of Mt. Clemens after the family moved there. He also sold papers on the streets of the resort city. When he was 13 years old, he attended the manual training school at Notre Dame and waited on table for his education. But family reverses made it impossible for him to continue, and he was forced to quit school with less than a year's opportunity and the family moved to Wallaceburg, Ont., when Mr. Groesbeck was but 14 years old.

Here he entered the army of toilers, working in a stove mill and driving a team. He added to his education by attending night school. This was largely because of the insistence of his mother, who was ambitious for her boy to succeed in life. Mr. Groesbeck continued to work hard at Wallaceburg, Ont., and it was there that he began the study of law, his first books being the few volumes his father had saved from the days when he was justice of the peace in Macomb county. He was then but 16 years old. At the age of 17 he went to Port Huron, and entered the law office of Stevens and Merriam, then one of the best known firms in the eastern part of the state. When but 19 years old he took the bar examination and passed with honors, but because of his age he was denied a certificate to practice. He therefore attended the law school in the university of Michigan for a year and was given his degree in 1893, when he was not yet 20 years old. He came to Detroit in July of that year and began the practice of law, the age limit not being enforced quite as strictly then as it is now. Mr. Groesbeck has since continued the practice of law in Detroit.

A Strong Republican.
Mr. Groesbeck early took an interest in politics and for years has been recognized as one of the strong Republicans of Wayne county, although he never sought elective office. In 1912, when the party was disrupted he accepted the chairmanship of the Republican committee when others who were approached shied away from the appointment. Despite the bitterness of that campaign he fought steadily on for Republican principles, and has continued to do so since.

Just at word on the candidacy of Mr. Groesbeck. It is the claim of his friends that he is the candidate supported by Detroit and Wayne county officials, including the sheriff, clerk, treasurer, register of deeds, three auditors and three road commissioners, in addition to minor officials, are all supporting Mr. Groesbeck in his candidacy for governor, that the same is true of the city government where the city officials from Mayor down, including a majority of the aldermen, are with Mr. Groesbeck. Mr. Groesbeck is a 32nd degree Mason and is also a member of the Elks, the Loyal Order of Moose, the Macabees and the K. of P.
